Role and purpose

The purpose of this workstream is to take forward the actions to address priorities of the VAWDASV Strategy 2022 to 2026 and Blueprint Programme, ensuring an evidence and research led approach to Blueprint delivery.

There is a danger that the needs of children and young people have not been adequately recognised to date. As part of the comprehensive understanding of violence against women, domestic violence and sexual abuse, we will consider our understanding of the needs of children and young people to ensure service responses are appropriate and that harms are prevented and addressed for these groups.

Working alongside Welsh Government Safeguarding, we will ensure that there is clarity and cohesion in approaches to Safeguarding and violence against women, domestic abuse and sexual violence. The group will also be able to support the implementation of the Relationships and Sexuality Education (RSE) curriculum's promotion of healthy relationships, as well as work to address peer on peer sexual harassment and abuse.

Within the scope of this workstream, "children and young people" will be defined as those up to the age of 18, including ages 19 to 25 for those who may have additional needs (e.g., care experience). Whilst the workstream is primarily targeted at those aged 25 and under, its work will be relevant to individuals above 25 experiencing transition periods into adulthood, and sharing characteristics a reasonable person would expect to see in someone under 25.

Equality statement

The impact of VAWDASV is not uniform, affecting different people in different ways. Most obviously, women are disproportionately affected by VAWDASV and the strategy recognises this gender imbalance. This is both a cause and consequence of gender inequality. Gender inequality provides the underlying conditions for violence against women. It exists at many levels in our society; from the disproportionate levels of men in leadership and decision-making roles, economic factors like the gender pay gap, and family and relationship roles and expectations. There is a strong and consistent association between gender inequality and violence against women.

Beyond this, however, the lived experience of VAWDASV is intrinsically linked to factors that relate to a wider range of equality characteristics. As a result of intersecting forms of discrimination and oppression, some groups of people experience different, more frequent, or more severe violence, or face additional barriers to help-seeking. Crucially, the impact can be cumulative for people with more than one such characteristic (e.g. black women or LGBTQ+ children). An intersectional approach is therefore vital, to help us develop our understanding of VAWDASV and address the diverse needs of all those affected, including children, older people, Black, Asian and Minority Ethnic people, disabled people and LGBTQ+ communities. Each workstream will need to take these issues into consideration throughout their work, to ensure our outcomes promote equality consistently and comprehensively.

Strategy.

It is very much acknowledged that participation in the VAWDASV workstream is an extra work commitment for members of the working group. If members have any concerns about their capacity to contribute to the workstream, they can contact the Project Delivery Manager who would be happy to discuss this with them, and where possible, work with them to find a practical solution.

Discussing and working on VAWDASV topics can be distressing, trigger past trauma and/or cause vicarious trauma. It is vital for the workstream to remain trauma informed in its approach, and this includes being sensitive to the needs of all members of the working group. Members can reach out to the Project Delivery Manager if they have any concerns about how participation in the group may be affecting them, or if they have any other concerns linked to VAWDASV or for their mental wellbeing. The Project Delivery Manager cannot provide therapeutic support but would be available to listen in confidence and sign-post members to the most appropriate support. Members may also want to speak to their line-manager, and/or contact and access resources from:
