Dear [name],

ATISN 11883: Communication about home education and home educated children

Thank you for your request which I received on 8 January 2018 asking for copies of Government communications to and from the office of the Children's Commissioner for Wales and the National Independent Safeguarding Board on the topic of elective home education and home educated children from January 2017 to the present date.

I have decided that some of the information caught by your request should be exempted from disclosure under the s40(2) "personal data" exemption provided by the Freedom of Information act 2000. A full description of our application of this exemption is set out in Annex A to this letter.

In a number of instances the information falling within the remit of your request was contained within emails and minutes of meetings discussing other matters. We have only considered disclosure of those parts relating to elective home education and home educated children.

On occasion, the redaction of exempted information and the removal of information relating to other matters has resulted in something that is little more that a collection of odd words or sentences. Rather than provide these we have, in line with the guidance from the Information Commissioners Office, provides a summary of the relevant information.

If you are dissatisfied with the Welsh Government’s handling of your request, you can ask for an internal review within 40 working days of the date of this response. Requests for an internal review should be addressed to the Welsh Government’s Freedom of Information Officer at:

Information Rights Unit,
Welsh Government,
Cathays Park,
Cardiff,
CF10 3NQ

or Email: FreedomOfInformationOfficer@gov.wales

Please remember to quote the ATISN reference number above.

You also have the right to complain to the Information Commissioner. The Information Commissioner can be contacted at: Information Commissioner’s Office,
However, please note that the Commissioner will not normally investigate a complaint until it has been through our own internal review process.

Yours sincerely
Application for Exemption

Section 40 – Personal Data

Section 40 of the Freedom of Information Act sets out an exemption from the right to know if the information requested is personal information protected by the Data Protection Act 1998 (DPA). Personal data is defined in Section 1(1) of the DPA as: “personal data” means data which relates to a living individual who can be identified from those data; or from those data and other information which is in the possession of, or is likely to come into the possession of, the data controller”. I have concluded that, in this instance, the withheld information within the Departure Request amounts to third party personal data.

Under Section 40(2) of the FOI Act, personal data is exempt from release if disclosure would breach one of the data protection principles. I consider the principle being most relevant in this instance as being the first.

The first data protection principle states:

Personal data shall be processed fairly and lawfully and, in particular, shall not be processed unless -

(a) at least one of the conditions in Schedule 2 is met, and (b) in the case of sensitive personal data, at least one of the conditions in Schedule 3 is also met.

I consider that the withheld information in relation to names and contact details falls within the description of personal data as defined by the DPA and that its disclosure would breach the first data protection principle. The first data protection principle has two components:

1. Personal data shall be processed fairly and lawfully and
2. Personal data shall not be processed unless at least one of the conditions in DPA schedule 2 is met

Guidance from the Information Commissioner’s Office (Personal information (section 40 and regulation 13) v 1.4) states:

If disclosure would not be fair, then the information is exempt from disclosure.

This approach was endorsed by the Court of Appeal in the case of Deborah Clark v the Information Commissioner and East Hertfordshire District Council where it was held:

“The first data protection principle entails a consideration of whether it would be fair to disclose the personal data in all the circumstances. The Commissioner determined that it would not be fair to disclose the requested information and thus the first data protection principle would be breached. There was no need in the present case therefore to consider whether any other Schedule 2 condition or conditions could be met because even if such conditions could be established, it would still not be possible to disclose the personal data without breaching the DPA” (paragraph 63).
Our analysis of the ICO’s key considerations in assessing ‘fairness’, as set out in the Guidance, are presented below.

The withheld information amounts to the personal data of third party officers who do not have public facing roles and would not expect their names and contact details to be released in this context. There are set procedures in place for members of the public to contact both the Welsh Government using generic contact mechanisms. Having such systems in place means members of the public do not make direct contact with officials and avoids those officials dealing with potentially unnecessary and disruptive correspondence. In this context, the civil servants were liaising with each other as part of their normal course of business. In doing so, there would be no expectation that their personal details would at any time be placed in the public domain.

The Welsh Government does not believe there is any legitimate interest in the public or the requestor having access to this information, and we do not see any legitimate reason why the named officials need to be contacted directly. Because of that, it is believed release of this information would be unfair and so breach the first data protection principle. Despite withholding information of individual officer details, it remains clear which body issued or received the correspondence, which is the primary factor.

For that reason, I believe the information should be withheld under section 40(2) of the Freedom of Information Act. This is an absolute exemption and not subject to the public interest tests.

home education:

Welsh Government response to the Commissioner's Annual Report, including Commissioner's response

KC provided an overview of the debate, published response and actions thereafter.

SH expressed she was pleased that most of her recommendations had been accepted or partially accepted by Welsh Government but that she was disappointed with the response in relation to home education.

SH confirmed that the response to this particular recommendation highlighted the lack of progress by Welsh Government and that she was surprised the written response did not reflect some of the conversations she’d had with Welsh Government about the topic.

KC expressed that they were surprised with the Commissioner’s press statement in response to the written statement and asked SH to confirm next steps in relation to a potential review.

SH confirmed that she had a meeting with officials on 4 December about it and was reassured about Welsh Government next steps. SH confirmed that she will also want to discuss with relevant Ministers during her upcoming meetings, and will decide following those meetings whether or not to use her powers to review the actions
KC confirmed there were different legislative vehicles being considered. RT confirmed that Commissioner would expect at least a statement of intent from Welsh Government as an interim measure and that a full CRIA should be undertaken on those options. SH suggested Welsh Government had further discussions with ADSS and Directors of Education, who are supportive of SH call.

KC highlighted a lesson learned from this year’s process including the need for Welsh Government to share an early embargoed copy of the written statement with SH, which may have avoided the need for SH to issue a strong statement following late receipt of this year’s written statement.
