Understanding your care and support rights as you get older

Read this booklet to learn more about your care and support rights under the Social Services and Well-being (Wales) Act.
The Social Services and Well-being (Wales) Act came into effect on 6 April 2016.

This law exists to improve the well-being of people in Wales, particularly those who need care and support, and carers who need support.

The Act explains that well-being is:

- Making sure you know about your rights and what they mean for you
- Being healthy
- Protection from abuse, harm and neglect
- Having access to education, training, sports and leisure
- Having positive relationships with family and friends
- Being part of the community
- Having a social life
- Having a safe and secure home
There are several rights included in the Act which are important for you to know and understand. They are explained in the next few pages:

The right to well-being

The principle of well-being is at the heart of the Act.

Your local authority, local health board and Welsh Ministers must promote the well-being of people who need care and support, and carers who need support.

The right to have information, advice and assistance

Your local authority must provide information, advice and assistance about care and support services and it must be easy to find and to access.
The right to an assessment if your needs cannot be met by information and advice

Your local authority must carry out an assessment for any person, who may need care and support.

An assessment is a way of finding out what help you need.

Your right to an assessment is not affected by how much money you have, but you may be asked to contribute to the cost of your care and support.
The right to have your voice heard and have control over decisions about your care

During your assessment your local authority must ask you what matters to you and involve you in all decisions about your care and support. You can choose to have a friend or family member by your side to help you with this assessment.
The right to advocacy

If you are unable to fully take part in discussions yourself, an advocate is someone who can help make your voice heard when decisions are made about your care and support.

An independent advocate must be arranged if you are unable to speak up for yourself or do not have someone to support you to express your views, wishes and feelings.
