Dear

Request for Information – ATISN 14489

Thank you for your request for information dated 27 October. You asked for the following:

1. The scientific evidence which supports a ban on the purchase of non-essential goods from Welsh based shops or other outlets.
2. If there is no scientific evidence to support a ban then please state the non scientific reason for the ban on the purchase of non-essential goods from Welsh based shops or other outlets.
3. If the ban on the purchase of non-essential goods has no scientific basis, then please state how purchases and deliveries from online sources based outside of Wales will be considered safer for the Welsh population.

With coronavirus rising and spreading rapidly in every part of Wales, acting on the clear advice of its medical and scientific advisers, the Welsh Government introduced a time-limited firebreak to help bring coronavirus under control, prevent the NHS from becoming overwhelmed and ultimately to save lives. The firebreak period started on October 23 and ended on November 9. It contained a range of measures to curb the spread of coronavirus and break the chains of transmission by reducing contact between people, including the closure of non-essential retail.

We attach a link to the relevant regulations and the Coronavirus firebreak Frequently Asked Questions page:
