Understanding your rights as a carer

Read this booklet to learn more about your rights under the Social Services and Well-being (Wales) Act.
The Social Services and Well-being (Wales) Act came into effect on 6 April 2016.

This law exists to improve the well-being of people in Wales, particularly those who need care and support, and carers who need support.

The Act explains that well-being is:

- Making sure you know about your rights and what they mean for you
- Being healthy
- Protection from abuse, harm and neglect
- Having access to employment, education, training, sports and leisure
- Having positive relationships with family and friends
- Being part of the community
- Having a social life
- Having a safe and secure home
There are several rights included in the Act that are important for you to know and understand. These rights are the same for all carers, whether you are a child, a young person or an adult. They are explained in the next few pages.

The right to well-being

Your local authority, local health board and Welsh Ministers must promote the well-being of people who need care and support, and carers who need support.

The right to have information, advice and assistance

Your local authority must provide information, advice and assistance about support services so you can find and access them.
The right to an assessment if your needs cannot be met by information and advice

Your local authority must carry out a carers’ needs assessment for carers, who may need support.

This assessment is to find out what help you need.

Your right to an assessment is not affected by how much money you have, but you may be asked to contribute to the cost of your support.
The right to have your voice heard and have control over decisions about your support

During your assessment your local authority must ask you what matters to you as a carer, or a young carer. You must be involved in all decisions about your support. This will include whether the LA arranges your care or you arrange it using a direct payment.

If you'd like, you can choose to have a friend or family member by your side to help you.

Some local authorities may combine a carers’ needs assessment with an assessment for the person being cared for. This can only be done if you give your consent.
The right to advocacy

If you are unable to fully take part in discussions yourself, an advocate is someone who can help make your voice heard when decisions are made about your support.

An independent advocate must be arranged if you are unable to speak up for yourself or do not have someone to support you to express your views, wishes and feelings.
